Not one of the regular readers of THE SUNDAY WORLD should fail by any chance to-morrow to secure for himself a copy of his newspaper. Those who dwell in outer darkness, befuddling their brains with inferior publications, should read this brief announcement of a few of THE WORLD's features for this coming Sunday

MADEMOISELLE IXE.

This cleverly written and exciting novel will be printed complete in this single edition of THE SUNDAY WORLD. It tells the story of a young Russian girl who deliberately plans to murder a man who has oppressed her people, and who carries plan. The character is drawn in most admirable fashion. The young Nihilist, who with a fixed purpose enters an English family as governess, grows upon the reader as she does upon th quiet English people who have employed her. The tragic ending of her career leaves her friends in real life and in the book more devoted to her than possible. It is a story to make many girls wish that they had something bigger on hand than dresses and bathing suits or silly young men to occupy their minds.

NELL NELSON.

This able and observant young writer tells about the babies in Berlin. The tale is calculated to keep an American baby from emigrating to Germany. Over there the very smallest images of their Creator have to do something for a living. They egin to do hard work as soon as they are physically capable of performing it, with ut reference to the effect which it must have on their future, and their lot is in many ways a very sad one.
